2007 Arbor Day Celebration at Buford High School

The Lancaster Conservation District hosted its Arbor Day Celebration at Buford High School on Thursday, December 6, 2007 at 9:00 am.

Mr. Whisenhunt welcomed faculty, staff, student body and guests to the program. Student Council President Michael Prosser announced that Casey Outen was the winner of the poem contest the school sponsored. Casey Outen read her poem about trees.

Buford High requested that the Arbor Day Celebration be held in honor of Bobby Whited, a former student who died in a car accident. Some of Bobby's family members were present. Coach Mike Wells gave a remembrance speech about Bobby. The Principal, Mr. Jonathan Phipps, presented a plaque that will be placed beside the tree in the courtyard saying that the tree planted today was planted in remembrance of Bobby Whited.

Arbor Day is a national observance that was started back in 1872 by Julius Sterling Morton to encourage people to plant and care for trees. The National Arbor Day is the last Friday in April and each state has their own day to celebrate Arbor Day, which in South Carolina is the first Friday in December.

Each school in the Lancaster County School District was invited to participate in the contest. Buford High School was selected as the winner of the Lancaster Conservation District's Arbor Day Contest for 2007.

The representative from Buford High School was Jeffrey Whisenhunt, Agricultural Educator. He wrote a short paper on why the Lancaster Conservation District should host the celebration at their school.

Mr. Whisenhunt said "Buford High is dedicated to improving the character and quality of students and their lives. Through your presentation on Arbor Day, we will be able to reinforce the importance of keeping our campus clean and managing natural resources. This is something that we strive to teach the students on a daily basis. Education and management of a campus is intended to inspire our students to manage and maintain their lives off campus at a higher level than what it is now," said Mr. Whisenhunt.

"We wanted to plant a tree in memory of Bobby Whited because he was an excellent student and showed great character in his life. Hopefully this tree will be a symbol to our students to constantly work on their character like Bobby did," Mr. Whisenhunt said.

"The Lancaster Conservation District commends the school on its efforts to protect our natural resources," said Sandy Nelson, Chair of the Lancaster Conservation District.

Are You A "Locavore?"

Global warming, carbon footprints, conservation of water and fuel - there is a lot in the news these days about what individual people can do to make the environment healthier. Here's one thing you can do: you can become more of a 'locavore.'

What in the world is a 'locavore?' Well, for one thing, it is the New Oxford American Dictionary's "2007 Word of the Year." It means someone who tries to buy and eat (the 'vore' part of the word) food that is grown locally (the 'loca' part of the word). You may remember '-vore' words from high school science. An animal that eats only plants is called an 'herbivore.' An animal that eats meat and plants and anything else they can find is called an 'omnivore.'

"The word 'locavore' was coined two years ago by a group of four women in San Francisco who proposed that local residents should try to eat only food grown or produced within a 100-mile radius," according to the Oxford University Press web site. Other regional movements followed, some calling themselves 'localvores.'

Buying locally-grown food means that fuel is not used to ship produce long distances. Also, small farmers usually use small tractors and other small-scale equipment, so the local farmers do not put off as much greenhouse gas as large commercial farmers. Many people in Lancaster County have gardens and grow their own food. There are two farmers markets in Lancaster County: the county market on Highway 9 across from the Sheriff's office and the Lancaster Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association market at Ace Hardware and Garden Center on South Market Street. These markets are not open year-round, but they provide the opportunity for Lancaster County citizens to buy fruits and vegetables grown near to home.

"People buying at the markets should always ask if the produce is grown locally," said Mae Barber, President of the Lancaster Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association. "We allow only members of our association to sell at Ace Hardware, and they must sell only their produce or that of family members."

"As well as helping the environment, we think the taste is so much better because our fruits and vegetables are so much fresher," said Barber. "The produce hasn't sat in a warehouse or a truck for hours or days."

The Lancaster Conservation District and its partners, the USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service and the SC Department of Natural Resources, support conservation of all our natural resources. For more information, contact the conservation office in Lancaster at 803-286-4455, extension 3.

Tree-Free Products

Did you know that there are "Earth Friendly" forms of clothes and note paper? By making an effort to use these products, and others like them, we can live our "normal" lives but create less waste, use less energy and conserve our environment. Some companies are using bamboo, sugar cane and kenaf as alternatives.

What is kenaf? A member of the hibiscus family (Hibiscus cannabinus L), it is related to cotton and okra, and grows well in many parts of the U.S. It offers a way to make paper without cutting trees. Kenaf grows quickly, rising to heights of 12-14 feet in as little as 4 to 5 months...studies show that kenaf yields of 6 to 10 tons of dry fiber per acre per year are generally 3 to 5 times greater than the yield for Southern pine trees, which can take from 7 to 40 years to reach harvestable size.
